I hʾs¹----

By Hʾs¹----

Apparatus Criticus:
RVP: I hʾs¹ {b}{n} s²[w]f

Commentary:
Whatever followed hʾs¹ was lost when a section of the surface laminated and broke off. The four letters on the other side of the lamination appear to be running in the opposite direction to this text and we have read them as a separate inscription RVP 9.4

Provenance:
Unspecified site, unspecified region, unspecified country.

Apparatus Criticus:
RVP: lṣwr bn ḥrṣ "By Sṣwr bn ḥrṣ he transfixed the brothers of ṣ’d ----“

Commentary:
There might be further letters between the l and ḥ on the other side of the stone. ḥn on the left must be a continuation of the text. Below there is perhaps the remains of a r.

By Ḥny son of Yṣʾlm son of Ṣʾḍn son of Mlk and he camped here the year the lineage of bgr fled from Sʾdr and (the driving out) of the Jews and so O Bʾlsʾmn [grant] deliverance from misfortune and safety
Apparatus Criticus:
RmNSWQ 191: ḫy b n ʾlm bn ḡl bn mlk w ḥll h- dr sʾnt.....

Commentary:
The inscription runs over five faces of the rock. Comparison with other inscriptions which contain the part of this genealogy after the first name show that the third name must be ṡfn despite the large and misshapen n. The n can be seen on the photograph, just after the ḥ. The interpretation of the passage read as w ḥw(f) ḥl yhd is suggested tentatively and is not a secure basis for historical speculation! The letter read as the first ḥ has been converted from a b and so has a curved form, while the letter read as the second ḥ looks more like a f, and to read it as ḥ one would have to assume that the prongs of the forks at each end had been joined. The word ḥw(f) has been explained from the infinitive (ḥawā) of the Arabic verb ḥawā “to become devoid of inhabitants, unoccupied” used of houses or places (Lane 827b). The word ḡly occurs in two other Safaitic inscriptions (Ali Hajaj 22 and AbaN 881). It has been interpreted on the basis of Arabic ḡalā “to emigrate, flee, be dispersed from one’s abode through fear or famine” (Lane 446c). The ḥygr may possibly be the people of Edessa which had a series of kings of this name, see Macdonald 2014: 160, n. 78.

l ʿmʾn bʿn ḫlf bʿn mlʾkʾy w wgm ʾl- khlʾn

By Mʾn son of Ḫlf son of (Mlʾkʾy) and he grieved for Khln

Commentary:
The third name is rather uncertain. It is possible that the second letter is a ṣ running into a ḫ. Alternatively, the second letter might be a g with a following short line attached to its curve, in which case the name could be read as mġny. The problem with the latter suggestion is that the other examples of n in the text are dots. It is unclear whether the statement of grieving should be read here or with SAMAS 9.42.1. It is written more carefully than the letters of either SAMAS 9.42.1 or 2.

Commentary:
See Macdonald, Al Muzzzin & Nehmé 1996: 453-458, where this is number D. The penultimate tribal name was read there as fr but it seems more likely that it is sʾrṭ (compare the f before ḥbrb and the ṭ of h- bḥṣʾy). At 16 generations, this is one of the longest Dfighter genealogies, but see SESP.S 2 and see family-tree in Macdonald, Al Muʾazzin & Nehmé 1996: 455. The same author gave his genealogy in WQs 9.

Provenance:
Unnamed, Al-Suweidah, Syria
At 21.3 km east of Rushayda and at 7.5 km west of Biʾr al-Ruṣayf, the Rushayda-Zalaf road crosses a small tributary of Wādī al-Shām called by the local Bedouins Umm al-Ǧathādir (its confluence with Wādī al-Shām is 1.5 km to the north-east). Site SESP.S is approximately 200 m north-north-east of site SESP.U on the same (right) bank of Umm al-Ǧathādir. It is a large cairn on top of the promontory (about 10 m above the wadi bed), overlooking the point at which the tributary wadi turns east, approximately 1 km before its confluence with Wādī al-Shām. Commentary:
As in SESP.S 1, the genealogy here has 16 generations but shows a rather distant branch of the tribal genealogy from that in SESP.1. SESP.2–4 are by three brothers. SESP.2–4 demonstrate two of the three methods of marking affiliation to a social group. In SESP 2 this is done by tracing the author’s lineage to the eponymous ancestor of his group, while the authors of SESP.3 and 4 use the expression ʿl (“he of the lineage of”) plus the group’s name. These three inscriptions show that the ʿl Kn was a sub-group of the ʿl df. Although the last letter of the sixth name is much longer than the first and looks like a ʾl, comparison with the other kn genealogies shows that the name must be nʾmn. After the second nʾmn there are six letters which have been scratched over so effectively that it is difficult to work out what they were. For the interpretation of ʾdy see Al-Jallad 2015: 309 and for the interpretation of nqʾt see Al-Jallad 2015: 335.

SESP.S 4

\[ l\, s^2 (\{\{\}l) \, b n \, 'b d \, b n \, d h d \, b n \, 'b d \, b n \, d \, 'b \cdot ' l \, k n \]

By Ṣʿ b son of ḫbd son of ḫhd son of ḫbd son of ḫ d of the lineage of Kn

Commentary:
SESP.S 2–4 are by three brothers. SESP.2–4 demonstrate two of the methods of marking affiliation to a social group. In SESP 2 this is done by tracing the author’s lineage to the eponymous ancestor of his group, while the authors of SESP.S 3 and 4 use the expression ḫ d- 'l ("he of the lineage of") plus the group’s name. These three inscriptions show that the Ṣ Kn was a sub-group of the Ṣ df.

At 21.3 km east of Rushayda and at 7.5 km west of Biʿr al-Ruṣayʿī, the Rushaydah-Zalaf road crosses a small tributary of Wādī al-Ǧathādir called by the local Bedouins Umm al-Ǧathādir (its confluence with Wādī al-Ǧathādir is 1.5 km to the north-east). Site SESP.S is approximately 200 m north-north-east of site SESP.U on the same (right) bank of Umm al-Ǧathādir. It is a large cairn on top of the promontory (about 10 m above the wadi bed), overlooking the point at which the tributary wadi turns east, approximately 1 km before its confluence with Wādī al-Ǧathādir. This is site D in Macdonald, Al Muʿazzin & Nehmé 1996.

By ḫbd son of Ṣmlk son of Ms² r son of ḫh k son of Ṣm z and he found the inscription of his paternal uncle, so he was sad and he journeyed quickly. So, O Ṣdy and Gd ḡw d [grant] booty

Commentary:
SESP.S 5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. This text starts at the top of the vertical face but runs onto an adjacent face and then back onto the vertical face to end up just to the right of the drawing of a camel. The author carved a m before the second name and does not seem to have erased it, but it would produce an impossible name. He also omitted the s² in ms² r and added it below the line.

Commentary:

SESP.S 5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. This text starts just below the beginning of SESP.S 5 and runs parallel with it down the right-hand side of the face, with the last two letters on the adjoining face. It is not clear whether \( nq' \) is a different word from the usual \( nq' \), or whether the author simply forgot the \( t \). Note that the expression \( m^l' - hwq \) also occurs in SESP.D 12 and KRS 1015. For an explanation of the phrase see Al-Jallad 2015: 152.

lḥṣ't bn grm'l bn 'n'm bn fltt bn ḥ----

By Ḥṣ't son of Grm'l son of 'n'm son of Fltt son of ḥ----
Commentary:
SESP.S 5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. In lightly scratched letters outside the cartouche between 12 and 14. The ' of grm ' are in small letters just above the b of the following bn, and the ' of n'm is immediately above the n. By ḥṣ son of ‘lḥt son of ‘bd son of ‘ḥnt son of ḫnn’il and he found the traces of [members of] the lineage of Ms²r and so he was sad

Commentary:
SESP.S 14 and 15 plus a rock drawing are on a narrow face adjacent to that bearing SESP.S 5–13. Given the presence of the personal name ms²r in the genealogies in SESP.S 5, 9, 10, and 12, on the same stone as this text, it seems likely that some at least were members of a family known as the ṣ ms²r.

Commentary:
The word lst is found again in another inscription by the same author (Ali inscriptions 67) and in the a third on the same stone (Ali inscriptions 68) in both of which it appears as h- lst, as opposed to ʾ lst here. So it is clear that it is a noun preceded by the definite article (on the different forms of the definite article in Safaitic see Al-jallad 2015: 16–17) and it is interesting that the same author uses both the ʾ- and h-forms. Its occurrence between the author’s patronym and his lineage would suggest that it is a title. The root L-Š-T is not found in Semitic, but may be derived from Greek ληστής “a bandit, brigand, or pirate”. It is the word Josephus uses of the “brigands” of the Trachonitis (the modern Leğā) who were helped by the Nabataean king Obodas III and his minister Syllaesus (see Josephus Jewish Antiquities XVI 271–292). One could speculate that ḫml bn ʾṣlm (here and in Ali inscriptions 67), and ḫml bn ṣṃ (in Ali inscriptions 68) were bandit leaders who took the Greek label as a title of pride, but there is of course no evidence for this, and we have no Safaitic inscriptions from the Leğā. If we are correct in restoring a [w] between ʾmrn ʾl gʿbr and mlh ʾl t it would seem probable that the preceding ṭḥ is in the dual. The diphthong ending marking the dual would not have been correct of course in Safaitic orthography.

Commentary:
It is impossible to see more than a few of the letters on the photograph and so we are reliant on the hand copy for the text of this inscription. It is interesting that the author gives his lineage at two levels, ḍ-ʾlʾ (dʾ) ḍ-ʾlʾ bʾr, which is unusual though not unknown in Sāfātī inscriptions. The expression ṭmnʾy ʾ(ʾnqʿt has not been found before in Sāfātī, and this is the first occurrence of the number “eight” in these inscriptions. In Classical Arabic ṭnqʾ is the plural of ṭnah “a well with a great deal of water” (ʿLsān 4526a). The emendation of the copy (nothing is visible at this point on the photograph) to b- (r)ʾyʾ ṭ]ʾ(y) “the (rising) {of Taurus)” was suggested tentatively by A. Al-Jallad. For this expression see Al-Jallad 2014: 216–217, 233; and in press, a. Note, however, that on the copy the letter read as r in (r)ʾyʾ has no hooks, unlike all the other examples of r in the text. The “rising of Taurus” would be late April (Al-Jallad 2014: 218, Table 3). On mdnt possibly referring to the Roman provinces of Syria and/or Arabia, see Macdonald 2015: 154.

By {Blṣy} son of Mḥnn and he grieved for Fr’

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 9: ṣy for {b}lṣy; flḥ for fr’

Commentary:
There are two letters at the beginning of the text which can be seen on the photograph and on Harding’s copy but which are not reproduced in SIJ. Blṣy would be a new name but cf. Blṣṭ in C 1853. Similarly although the g of wgm has been excluded from the photograph it is present on Harding’s original copy but was not reproduced in the copy in SIJ. The photograph shows that penultimate letter of the text has a short stroke at right angles to the stem and so should be read r. The final letter is clearly ‘ on both the photograph and Harding’s copy.

By Fr’ son of Frq and kept watch ---- enemies and so O {Rdw} [grant] deliverance

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ: l flḥ bn frd wt----

Commentary:
Most of the text is visible on the photograph with the exception of 3 or 4 letters after ‘l. The verb tżr is normally followed by a direct object so ‘l is unlikely to represent the preposition here and is more probably the beginning of a noun perhaps ‘lḥ = ‘dry fodder’. The l’s and r’s are well differentiated hence SIJ’s reading of the first name is untenable.

By (Qn--) son of (ʾnʿm) is the young male camel

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 18: (h)[g] dl for ----dl

Commentary:
Winnett emends the second name to 'nʿm and attributes the spelling in the copy to "copyist's error". Note that Harding's original copy of SIJ 3 also records 'nʿm (the copy in SIJ has been altered) but here it is clear from the photograph that the original read 'nʿm. Although SIJ does not mention a drawing the text strongly suggests that there must have been one.

By Ṭrs son of Bnklbt son of Mṭr son of Mʿz son of Fdg and he went to get salt and so O Lt [grant] security and deliverance from distress this year.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 37: *bn klḥt for bn bnklḥt; ’he journeyed’ for ’he traded in salt’; bʾs¹ s¹nt’ the danger of lanceheads’ for bʾs¹ s¹nt ’distress this year’.

Al-Jallad in press, a, Appendix 4: w mlḥ f h lt s¹lm w fṣyt m- bʾs¹ s¹nt “and Aquarius appeared (rose ?) and so O Lt may he be secure and may this year bring deliverance from misfortune”.

Commentary:
All the letters are clear. The verb malah is still used among the Bedouin of ḥarrah for going to buy salt from the villages of the northern Wādi al-Sirḥān or those of the Ġabal al-ʿArab (pers. comm.and see Denizeau 1960: 502). The ’before s¹nt is clear on the photograph and may represent one of the forms of the definite article in Safaitic (see Al-Jallad 2015: 74–76), i.e. ”this year”. On the other hand, s¹nt could be the equivalent of Ar. ṣnāt the maṣdar of asnata (Lane p. 1440c) both meaning ’to experience drought’.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 51: l wny bn hd bn hl s only. SIJ 53: w wgm 'l hd bn wblh.

Commentary:
Winnet reads w wgm etc. with SIJ 53. However this passage follows immediately after the genealogy of SIJ 51 and though in smaller letters is in the same type of script. By contrast not only is there a gap between the last name of SIJ 53 and w wgm etc. but the two are in different hands.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 76 reads this with that text as bġmdnrwdr

Commentary:
The letter-forms of this text are quite different from those of SIJ 76 (most strikingly ǧ but see also r and l). Winnett reads the first and last letters as b and l respectively but they are simply hooked l’s. There is no trace of a n after the b and it is tempting to suggest that the author wrote nb for bn. However both the names ġmd and ġmdn are attested, so this can be no more than a hypothesis.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 85: bd(r)l for bdbl on both occasions; f---- bʾsʾ for f bʾsʾ; omits everything after mzll.
SIAM I p. 101: bdbl on both occasions

Commentary:
The letters r and b are clearly distinguished in this text and there is no reason to emend bdbl to bd(r)l see the discussion in SIAM I p. 101. The photographs (Winn H5/II 7 and IV 32) show that nothing has been lost between the f and bʾsʾ. The last part of the text, which Winnett did not read, is in very small letters. The antepenultimate sign could be a š or a ʾ and the final one a y, m or g.

By Ghm son of fdlt son of {Rb'} son of {’rb---}

Commentary:
The fork of the ḥ is crossed by a line of lighter patina. The letters r b in the last two names are joined by proximity making them look like a m. This text and 104.2 and 104.3 are written over two faces of the same rock which bears SIJ 105–106. Unfortunately only one face was copied and photographed. The present text starts in large letters on the visible face. The passage from d- 'l to bt which is in small letters below it may be the end of the same text or of another which starts on the hidden face. Commentary:
As noted by Winnett, the s¹ of ys¹m‘l is not visible on the photograph, though there is space for it, but present on Thompson’s (unpublished) copy, though not on Morton’s (published) copy. Since Thompson did not know the Safaitic script (SIJ p. 3) it is unlikely that he would have made an unconscious correction in his copy and it is probable that the s¹ was just visible on the stone even though it does not show up on the photograph. lʾ b bn ᵇḥ w ᵑ ᵁ ᵄ ᵇ ᵆ ᵍ ᵇ ᵆ ᵇ rʾw ᵃ ᵄ ᵇ ᵆ ᵇ grm

By ṃʾb son of ᵇḥ and ᵄ Yṯʾ [grant] relief from a misdeed

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 123: glm for grm.

Commentary:
The word rwḥ here could be related to the Classical Arabic maṣdar of the 1st (faʿala) form verb from the root R-W-Ḥ, in the sense of “experiencing relief from grief or sorrow after suffering from it” (Lane p. 1178a and see 1182a). Winnett read the last word as glm comparing Classical Arabic ǧalmah/ǧulmah "the whole (of a thing)". However, this demands a construction which is difficult to explain syntactically. The reading grm is suggested here tentatively (cf. the r in rwḥ) with the meaning of a "misdeed or crime" (cf. Classical Arabic gurm "a sin, a crime, an offence", Lane p. 413a).

SIJ 124
By ḥṣʾn son of Sḥḥb son of Ḥḏʾr and he followed [i.e. sought for?] water during the rising of Scorpio

Apparatus Criticus:
JVR p. 36: mw for mw; b- rʾyʾ qbt “in sight of qbt”.
WH comm. 1016: b- rʾyʾ qbt “within sight of qbt”
Al-Jallad (in press, a): w rdf mwn b- rʾyʾ qbt “and he followed [the animals] experiencing much fatigue during the rising of Scorpio”

Commentary:
The text is enclosed in a cartouche. The first name is written vertically and the text then splits with bn * a name running to the left and another bn * name running to the right. The statement of the text is enclosed between these two and the edge of the cartouche. It is impossible to be sure which of these names is that of the father and which of the grandfather. It could even be a joint inscription by two individuals called ʿḥṣʾn with different fathers, though the peculiarities of the letter-forms suggest that it was written by only one person. We have placed the names in the above order simply because ḏʾzr is followed by the w of the statement. One fork of the second letter appears to have merged the preceding l. The third letter of Sḥḥb (read as ḟy by Winnett) is like the other ḏʾs in the text and quite different from the the ṣʾs. There is a clear ‘ after the ḏʾzr and the third letter, read as ḣ by Winnett, is quite different from the ḏ of rdf. The next sign cannot be a y (as read by Winnett) and is a straight line with a slight curve at one end like the ṣʾ in the rest of the text. Note that an addition has been made to the base of the ṣʾ of rdf (which could thus be a ǧ) and that the ṣʾ of ṣʾr is clear on the photograph even though marked as uncertain by Winnett. After rdf mw there is no n (as read by Jamme and Al-Jallad). There is a small dot between the w and the b, but in this inscription a dot represents ‘ while n is represented by a clear line. The dot here is smaller than the other examples in the text and it seems likely that it is extraneous to the inscription. We have tentatively taken mw as an alternative form of the more usual my meaning ”water” (compare C 1679). We follow Al-Jallad 2016: 102–103 in his interpretation of the phrase b rʾyʾ qbt.

Apparatus Criticus:
JMAA VII p. 129 n. 52: l ḣyʾl h lt ḡkrt ṛsw “By ḣyʾl. O Lt may she remember ṛsw”

Commentary:
The text is very lightly scratched between the first two names of SIJ 125 and the edge of the cartouche. It is invisible on the published plate (SIJ Pl. III) and is difficult to make out on the photograph. There seems to be nothing to justify Jamme’s reading ṛsw at the end, and his combination of the vocative with the optative perfect is grammatically impossible.

Commentary:
Additions have been made to most of the first fifteen letters of the inscription to make them into other letters and two additional signs have been added before the Ṭām auctoris. The altered text reads leʾlmmdmqdmsʾmzd. SIJ 168
Corpus of Safaitic inscriptions

1. Drʾl bn ḫdr w ṭgd s¹fr ʾnʾm ṭfwg/

By Drʾl son of ḫdr and he found the inscription of ʾnʾm and (so) he lamented for [him]

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 168: h-ʾnʾm or ʾnʾm for ṭfwg

Commentary:
The text as copied by Thompson is visible on the photograph as far as s¹fr but unless it continues on an adjacent face it is difficult to see where he found the last eight letters. SIJ 169 is immediately below this text but the presence of a lām auctoris makes it difficult to take it as the continuation of 168 and anyway Thompson clearly saw something else. The sloping stem of the first letter of ṭfwg suggests it is an ṣ of which the copyist has missed one of the side-strokes.

By Rġd son of {M}my son of S²rk

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 169: mbn(y) for {m}m{y}; ignores the second line

Commentary:
The initial l and r though not present on the copy are clear on the photograph. The second line in the copy could be a second attempt at copying the text.

By Bʿmh son of S¹wd son of {Wmḥy} and he grieved for Ḥrb and so he fought

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 172: gmḥ for {w}m{ḥ}{y}; ḥrb kbr for ḥrb f ḥrb.

Commentary:
The third name is very unclear on the photograph. The ‘ of ‘l can be seen on the photograph to be a circle similar to the third letter and not a dot as in Thompson’s copy. The antepenultimate letter is clearly a ḥ on the photograph and it is followed by a hooked r. Winnet ignores the f after the first ḥrb.

Commentary:
There is no sign of the w which Jamme reads at the end of the first name. The second letter of the second name is significantly different from the m’s in the text while the third letter is identical to the b’s. The second letter of the third name seems to have been miscopied and the open side is in fact at the base.

Commentary:
Jamme is surely correct in reading SIJ 187 and 188 as one text. However given the large space on the copy between w[h]... and ...s¹y he is surely incorrect in reading these four letters as one name. The g of w[g]m is not on the copy.

Commentary:
Although it is not certain it is probable that the letters w'tdtm belong to SIJ 227.1 as proposed by Clark. Their position and the square w which they share with that text support this and Jamme's claim (JMAA XIII p. 23-24) that the form of the m is closer to the forms in SIJ 227 than in 217.1 would be impossible to establish since the letter read as m in the latter is a partial restoration!

Commentary:
Although Harding’s copy is incomplete it seems certain that this is one text. There is a space on the copy between the ḫ and the y of the 6th name but the family tree under WH 1026 suggests that nothing has been lost and that the name is ḡy. The final name is clearly wʾb on Harding’s copy of this text and of SIJ 277 278. The second letter is also ’ in WH 1033 and LP 22. Only in WH 930 and LP 21 does it appear as h. All these texts are known only from copies. Given that 4 of the 6 texts have ’ it seems probable that the name is wʾb not whb.

l wdmʾl bn trṣ bn 's¹ bn hʾ[b] w s²ty {w} (w)l(d) s¹nt mrd gḥrb {h-} s¹l{ṭ}n

By Wdmʾl son of Trṣ son of 's¹ son of (Hʾb) and he spent the winter [here] {and} {helped [the animals] give birth} the year Gḥrb revolted against (the) government

Apparatus Criticus:
SJ 281:(h-) wr(d) for {w} (w)l(d); mḥrb for gḥrb.

Commentary:
The last letter of the fourth name has been hammered over and looks at first sight like a k. However the projecting straight line may not be part of the original letter and what is left looks like a b, rather than a r. The second word of the statement is exceptionally carelessly written even by the standards of this text. The sign after the y of s²ty cannot be resolved into h- w as in Winnett’s reading. It seems to have been written originally as a ū and the tops of the verticals have been joined to make what can only be a w. The next letter is also a w though of a quite different shape and the sign after that cannot be a r as read by Winnett and Jamme since it is a simple vertical line with no hooks. The final letter of the word is also doubtful but d seems the most likely reading. It is difficult to read the large ellipse immediately after mrd as a m (compare the m of mrd) and it must be a g. Although sense would seem to demand a h- before s¹ln the letter looks more like a k. Finally the ū of s¹ln lacks one vertical. There are three or four letters some of which are partially obliterated by later hammering in the space between trṣ and s²ty.

Apparatus Criticus:
SadF p. 45: w ḫṛṣ h- s²n’ - wa quṭ‘a dābîr al-‘udºw; mwgd · ǧinan/ẓafar

Commentary:
The first letter of mrbḥ is clearly m here (cf. SIJ 281). Mwgd could be the equivalent of Ar. mawāǧid (pl. of māǧd) “abundances”? In the Safaitic inscriptions the verb wld is usually used in a transitive sense equivalent to the Ar. II Form meaning “to birth” i.e. “to help an animal (usually goats) to give birth”. This was clearly an important annual event since far more texts recording birthing are dated than texts any other happenings. Interestingly many of the dates of birthings refer to political events in the settled areas. There are occasional texts where an event is dated by reference to two occurrences but in these cases the formula is always s¹nt ḫqāḍ w ḫqāḍ not s¹nt ḫqāḍ w s¹nt ḫqāḍ. Up to mrbḥ the text is carved in large chiselled letters but from mrbḥ onwards the letters are much smaller and are lightly incised. This together with the highly unusual

Commentary:
The published facsimile is an incomplete and inaccurate rendering of Harding’s hand-copy. The fourth name can be seen to be nzmnt on the photograph. The seventh is not entirely clear on the photograph but is closer to the k’mh of Harding’s original copy than to Winnett’s reading ktmnh. The ninth is extremely difficult and the eleventh is impossible to read on the photograph. For the statement Harding’s copy has wdʾhbʾ ḥrʾm lh but on the photograph this looks more like w d ⟨h⟩ ‘r’d. The letters immediately after this are impossible to read on the photograph with any certainty but the final signs before the invocation are certainly ‘m lh not ‘m lh.

Commentary:
Probably a longer version of the genealogy which occurs in SIJ 681. The first two gaps in the text are the result of the growth of lichen over the face. On the photograph it is impossible to see anything under the first but there would be sufficient room for bn ns²’s’t bn nz’m’l as in SIJ 681 in which the latter is followed by bn ’mr. Immediately after first gap there is what looks like a bn followed by some illegible signs which seem to be those which appear as ’mr on the facsimile in SIJ. From what is visible on the photograph this reading is impossible and it should be noted that on the published facsimile these letters have been misplaced immediately before bn ṭys²’t whereas in fact the second patch of lichen under which there would be room for at least one name intervenes. The third gap is the result of deliberate scratching over.

\[l \text{kyn } bn \text{ mn}′m\]

By Kyn son of Mn′m

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 306: k(h)l for kyn

Commentary:
Harding’s copy clearly reads kyn and the last letter is the same length as the n of bn and only slightly longer than that of mn′m though this is not reproduced in the facsimile published in SIJ. Cf SIJ 431 which is almost certainly by the same author. Jamme’s claim that 306 and 431 are two copies of the same text is rendered unlikely by the fact that the side stroke of the k protrudes from the lower part of the semi-circle in 306 and from the upper part in 431.

Ḥẓy is clear on the photograph. The w introducing the sentence and prayer is immediately after the y of the ḥẓy of this text and some way from the the second name of SIJ 350. It therefore seems more likely that it belongs to this text rather than to 350 with which SIJ reads it.

l s²q bn qmr bn s²q b ṣl zhr w nfr mn rm w ts²wq l- ḫwn - h l- mdr

By S²q son of Qmr son of S²q son of Ṣl son of Zhr and he escaped from Rm [the Romans] and he longed for his brothers who were in the inner desert

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 352: qml for qmr; l-ʾḥ wlh “for a brother grieving” for l-ʾḥwn -ḥ. MNH p. 329 and n. 172: on w nfr mn rm - and he escaped from Rm.

Commentary:
The last letter of the second name is clearly a r on the photographs. The spaces between bn and zhr and between the z and the h of zhr are due to holes in the rock. Despite Jamme’s claims to the contrary the f of nfr is absolutely clear on the photograph (A. 1812) used on SIJ Pl. V. Note that ts²wq here is followed by l- rather than the usual ʾl- . The lower parts of the strokes of the ḥ have been overscored and the left-hand one has been used as the lām of allāh in the Kufic inscription (Baramki 1964 (BNAS) p. 331 no. 8) below. Similarly the n of ḥwn has been lengthened to make the second lām of allāh. The difference in patina-colour between the original n and the extension can be seen on the photograph (A. 1812). The final phrase l- mdbr is curious but cannot be read in any other way. Presumably his brothers were in the inner desert.

l mḏny bn zbd w s²ṭ tr ḥ lt ḥnn

By Mḏny son of Zbd and he was cross-eyed. So, O Lt, (have) pity

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 353: mfny for mḏny; h{n}(n) for ḥnn.

Commentary:
The text is written vertically on a rock face and below line 2 there is the beginning of a Kufic graffito not published in Baramki 1964 (BNAS). Comparison of the third letter with the f introducing the prayer shows that the former cannot be a f and must be a ǧ. The n’s of ḥnn are clear on the photograph used for SIJ Pl. V and it is not clear why Winnett marked them as uncertain.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 360 read onlyʾzm for g(r)m.

Commentary:
The beginning of the text was cut by the edge of Winnett’s photograph, which is probably why he read only the last name. There is a small mark to the left of the top of the r in the second name, but this is thinner than the line of the rest of the letter and is probably extraneous. There are no letters between the final m and the apparent w behind the she-ass and the latter may be part of the drawing.

The letter after gyz is not clear on the photograph but does not seem to have a cross-stroke which is presumably why Winnett marked his w as doubtful. It seems more likely that it is a bn in which the b and n have been joined as is very common.

By wdm son of ḥlq and he tended the flocks in the leja and provided (them) with food

Commentary:
Comparison with the b of bn and the final letter shows that the first word of the sentence must be b’y. The antepenultimate letter would be back-to-front if it is a m and is more likely to have been a g of the doubled variety. The photograph shows both that the copy in SIJ is inaccurate and that Winnett’s reading is correct. Both the lām auctoris and the final letter have a slight curve at one end and are clearly l’s and the fourth letter is a clear ‘ not w. The dot shown on the copy at the end of the text is a stray mark.

Commentary:
The photograph was taken from an oblique angle and so is not entirely clear. The l of {k}hl has a generous curve at one end as do the other l's in the text the sign just before the unreadable letters looks identical to the first letter of the inscriptions and should probably therefore be read h.

The technique of this text is quite different from that of SIJ 516 and there seem no reason to suppose that the two belong together. The ’ marked with a question mark on the copy in SIJ can be seen to be on the photograph to be a series of small abrisions unconnected with the text.

Commentary:
‘ with a dot in the middle is found from time to time and should be distinguished from the sign of two concentric circles which is an occasional alternative form of ḫ. However if the circle with a dot represents ḫ it seems unlikely that the dot before the final letter can also represent it in the same text and the latter is probably an extraneous mark.

SIJ 673.3

Apparatus Criticus:
SJnN p. 53 note 48: reads some of the letters as SIJ 674bis: l служ bm rnyf.

Commentary:
A large number of lightly scratched letters which cover most of the face and probably represent a number of different texts, all of which were ignored by SIJ. Unfortunately the photographs (A. 1917 1918) are not clear enough to make any coherent reading possible. SJnN p. 53 note 48 read what he could see of a few of these letters on SIJ Pl. V as SIJ 674.1. However his reading is not borne out by the photograph.

Commentary:
The first three letters are above and at right angles to the beginning of SIJ 673 and the last two were taken by SIJ as the beginning of SIJ 674. There is then a space before the beginning of 674.2. Note that Jamme’s “SIJ 674bis” (SJnN p. 53 note 48) is an attempt to read a selection of the letters in SIJ 673.3.

Commentary:
The first two names are more or less clear on the photographs and Winnett's readings are impossible. The third name seems to consist of 4 letters but it is difficult to read any of them with confidence. See E.M. Smallwood "The Jews under Roman rule" (Leiden 1981) p. 96-97 for a discussion). Note the expression prondokías tou laoû 'oudaiwv ("the expectation of the people of the Jews") in Acts 12.11 is not an equivalent to 'l Yhd since here it almost certainly refers to 'the people' (the crowd as opposed to their leaders as it does in 12.4 to which it refers back.

Commentary:
Note that SIJ 704.1 (the text mentioned in the commentary to SIJ 704 as being too faint to read) is enclosed in the same cartouche with 702 (by this author’s brother) and 704 (the text by his father which he mentions finding). However since the last two letters of 704.1 cross the edge of the cartouch it seems probable that it was originally drawn to enclose 704 and 702 and that 704.1 was squeezed in when the author found the texts.

Hrf could be the equivalent of Ar. haf "sharp summit ledge [of a mountain]" (see Lane 550a) which would be appropriate for Tell al-ʿAbd where this inscription was found. Ngr would then mean "he kept watch guarded" (cf. Syr. ntr)

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 779: ‘lwn bn ṭdr w for ‘n- wn bn ṭhwr; reads SIJ 779.2 as the end of this text.

Commentary:
The restoration of the initial vocative particle seems certain. The ṭ has been split by a crack in the rock but cannot be anything else (cf. bn later in the text). The next letter is no different from the n of bn and so the preposition must be ‘n- “against”. The direction of the r suggests that the w precedes it hence ṭhwr. There is no connection between this text and SIJ 779.2.

l ys¹ʿd bn qnt<<<<

By Ys¹ʿd son of Qnt

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 779: reads as the end of 779.1: s¹ʿd bn qnt.
Commentary:
The first complete letter on the photograph is y and there are traces of a vertical stroke before it. Although this letter is clipped by the edge of the photograph it is clear that the edge of the stone is so close that there would be no room for any letters before this vertical stroke. Thus h rd y or h nh y are ruled out as restorations and this stroke can only be the lām auctoris. There is what appears to be a diagonal stroke at the end of the text which does not seem to be a letter. If it is then the last name would be qtnn.

Apparatus Criticus:
JMAA VII p. 133 n. 77 (as SIJ 783 b): [----] h bn wdl.

These are the scratched letters above the end of SIJ 783. They are mainly obscured by large wasm which Jamme takes as another text (his “SIJ 783a” which he reads: l lb). l mrh(n) bn ‘l(b) w gls¹ b-ḥl qṣṣ b‘-‘m(r)f†

By Mrhn son of ‘lb and he stopped at this empty area and he followed the traces ... of the lineage of ‘mrt.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 789: only qṣṣ read. JSaN p. 48 note 41:1 mrhn bn ‘ql w gls¹ bḥl qṣṣ.

Commentary:
The surface of the stone has been covered with later scorings and hammerings which have obscured parts of this text which is elegantly written in the semi-square script. B and ṛ are carefully distinguished the former having a square form and the latter being rounded. The circles of the letters ḏ w ṣ and ṣ are carefully drawn an this suggests that the fourth letter is probably a ḏ rather than a ṣ despite the fact that the prongs of the fork appear to be joined. Similarly the second letter of the patronym cannot be ṣ as read by Jamme (cf. the large circle of the q of qṣṣ). Only one letter is obscured after b‘ and while in the context it is probably a ḏ it is impossible to be sure. There are numerous lightly scratched letters on the same face but no coherent reading can be made from the photograph.

\(l\) \(s\)\(g\)\(b\)\(n\) \(s\)\(b\)\(h\) \(bn\) \(r\(g\)d\)\(bn\) \(b\(_c\)lm \(h\) \(r\)\(dy\) \(n\)\(q\)\(m\)\(t\) \(m\)\(-\)l\(km\) \(b\)\(n\) \(\(n\)\)\(b\)\(gr\) \(-\)h \(w\) \(\(w\)\(r\) \(d\)\(\}\) \(y\)\(w\)\(r\)\(h\) \(s\)\(f\)

By S\(g\) son of S\(b\) son of R\(gd\) son of B\(lm\) O R\(dy\) [grant] revenge on L\(km\) son of T\(b\) his neighbour and blind whoever scratches out the inscription

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 825: \(b\)\(gd\) for \(r\)\(g\)\(d\) \(r\)\(dy\) for \(h\) \(r\)\(dy\\) \(m\)\(n\) \(k\)\(m\) \(g\)\(nt\) \(b\)\(r\)\(-\)h for \(m\)\(-\)l\(km\) \(b\)\(n\) \(\(n\)\(b\)\(gr\) \(-\)h; reads \(w\) \(\(w\)\(r\) \(d\)\(\}\) \(y\)\(w\)\(r\)\(h\) \(s\)\(f\).

Commentary:
The entire text is absolutely clear on the photograph. The letters \(b\) and \(r\) are clearly distinguished so the third name can only be \(r\)\(gd\). The letters \(l\) and \(h\) in \(b\(_c\)lm \(h\) \(r\)\(dy\) are lightly scratched but their position in relation to the other letters makes it highly probable that they are original. Thompson’s copy omitted the \(h\) before \(r\)\(dy\). The letter following the \(m\) after \(n\)\(q\)\(m\)\(t\) is clearly a \(l\) not a \(n\). A diagonal line has been added to the \(b\) of the following \(bn\) making it look like a \(g\). SIJ takes the curse as part of 826 but its position and the quite different form of \(r\) in 826 make this impossible. The author omitted the \(\(w\)\(r\) of \(y\)\(w\)\(r\) and squeezed in the ‘ between the \(d\) and the following \(h\) and added the \(w\)\(r\) below. The \(s\)\(f\) and the bottom of the \(r\) of \(s\)\(f\) have been hammered over but are still visible on the photograph.

{By} {‛-----N} son of {Grḥm} son of {ḥbb} (son of) {‛ṣl} son of {Ngy} ----M

Commentary:
The text begins vertically to the left of SIJ Extra 24 cuts across the end of 24 and then doubles back and runs diagonally across the left side of the face. It seems to continue vertically after ngy. The second letter has been altered from ‛ to š. The middle letters of this name have been rendered illegible. The ‘ of ē- ‘l in 24 has been written between the arms of the r of 25 suggesting that 25 must have been written first. The b of the third bn has been written inside the arms of the final b of ḥbb. The š of the following name has been changed into a š.

Commentary:
The letters are clear but as it stands the text is curious. The author clearly omitted the l of ḍ and it is possible that he made other mistakes. Thus the second and third names appear on the original as $ṣ¹nm$ nb $rbʾl$ but it is probable that the author reversed the n and the b of bn and forgot one side-stroke of the ‘. Cf. s¹nm in SIJ Extra 43 which is immediately above this text. Cf. also h’dmt bn s’nm in SIJ Extra 42.

l ṭmgýr bn ṭyld bn 'ṛs² w bnty 'l- bn -h w 'lf

By ṭmgýr son of ṭyld son of 'ṛs² and he built for his son and fed [the animals]

Apparatus Criticus:
SIT: 'l{f} for 'ṛs². SIAM II p. 194: read 'ṛs² for third name and it is uncertain whether the last four letters belong to the text. JMAA VIII p. 3: 'lg for 'l{f}. JMAA XIII p. 196-197: 'ṛs² for 'l{f}; reads the last four letters as a separate text in the opposite direction to that in which they were read by SIT: ḫk'w a proper name "Ḥk'w".

Commentary:
The s² has a vertical stroke with an arm at right angles at one end and a curve at the other. The last four letters have thicker carelessly hammered lines. Whilst SIAM II and JMAA XIII might be correct in suggesting that they are a separate text it is perhaps more likely that they do belong to this text and have been subsequently hammered over. JMAA XIII's suggestion is highly improbable.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIT: the n at the end is uncertain. JMAA XIII p.197: the n at the end is certain and the sign of a circle with a cross in it is a wasm.

Commentary:
SIT points out the k's resemble Thamudic ǧ's which is mistakenly printed as g in the publication. SIT would have been referring to Thamudic E. There is definitely a short stroke at the end after the b although it is inscribed in a slightly different technique. H unp.: f h lt (n)sr at the end "So Lt [give] victory".

Commentary:
The n after the first r is clear on the photograph. The most likely reading of the word after the second w is r’(y) which presumably the author repeated by mistake. The first letter resembles a r more than a b the second letter is uncertain but there could be an intentional dot inscribed slightly away from the centre of the preceding letter and the next letter is a line with a hammered dot at one end although it is not as pronounced as the one in the y of the previous word. The next letter is definitely an’ and is followed by a slight dash and then a gap which is large enough for another letter but nothing has been inscribed there possibly because the author wanted to avoid a crack in the rock. The letter after the gap could be a b or a r as could the letter which has been added to the side of the k. The letters (g)r are written in thicker lines and the r is joined to the t. There is then a w which is partially infilled and a n.

By ʿwj son of Dd (son of) Ḍʿl and

Apparatus Criticus:
CEDS 77: lʿwj bn gd bn ḍb′n w ---- “By ʿwj son of Gd son of ḍb′n and ----”. JMAA VIII p. 6: b[n] ḍlw for b(n) ḍʿlw; translation of ḍlw “He was exalted”.

Commentary:
The above reading is what occurs in the copy. The line following the second b is rather long for a n. The copy is either incomplete or the inscription unfinished. CEDS’s reading in some respects seems more convincing but there is no copy or photograph to check it with.

Provenance:

Commentary:
JMAA VIII probably reads the third letter as a t because the arms of the letter are slightly thickened lines but since the horizontal line is a curve and there is no evidence of circles at the end SIT’s reading is most likely justified.

By (M's) w ws¹q h- mbjht f‘nqd (f) syr w ḫṣ¹f

Apparatus Criticus:
SIT: g's for (m)'s; h mbjht for h mbjht; translated from w ws¹q as "and he drove the camels. So he escaped and returned and he became lean". CEDS 74: 1m's w ws¹q h mbjht f‘nqd f syr w ḫṣ¹f. JMAA VIII p. 7: gnš for (m)'s; ws¹q "to gather"; ‘nqd "he was rescued"; syr "to migrate". ḫṣ¹f cf. C 3064 translated in JSM p. 507. H unp: w ws¹q h mbjht "And he drove the camels which had a quivering motion in going along with short steps" or "He withstood the heavily armed men".

Commentary:
The reading of CEDS has not been checked but since it was made from the original there is probably some justification in emmending the second letter to m and in reading the letter after the second m as h.

SS 3 (Musée du Louvre AO 19801)

l ʾfl bn tfn

By ʾfl son of Tf

Commentary:
The text is carved on a fine limestone relief showing the god Baʿal-Šamin in the centre with Aglibōl on his right and Malakbēl on the left. There are five Palmyrene graffiti (SS 1, 2, 4, 5, 7), one Greek (SS 6) and one Safaitic (SS 3) carved between the figures. The last is carved vertically on the lower right of the relief beside the sword of Malakbēl. For the bibliography on the relief and an excellent photograph see Dentzer-Feydy & Teixidor 1993: 144–145, no. 153 (but note that the transliteration of the Safaitic inscription contains misprint in the second name). The same two names occur in both the Safaitic inscription and in one of the Palmyrene texts (SS 2). Starcky’s copy of SS 3 shows a curving line at the end of the Safaitic inscription but this is not confirmed on the photograph.

Provenance:
Said to have come from Wādī Miyah, not far from Bi’r Wereh, The Palmyrene, Syria. Musée du Louvre bought the relief from a dealer in 1945.

(l) ʾwdm h- bkrt

(By) ʾwdm is the young she-camel

Apparatus Criticus:

RVP: There is no mention in the commentary that the first letter in the copy has the form of a h.

Commentary:

The copy has a h for the first letter. There are dots between the arms of the b and k of bkrt. It is possible that h-bkrt belongs to Stein 1.2 rather than with this text.

Provenance:

At the foot of a cairn on a small hill 1/4 mile north of telegraph post 448-447. RVP p. 255, unspecified region, unspecified country.

Between H5 & H4

\( l\ yd(q)t\ bn\ s\,\wl\ bn\ \{\mathit{hrt}\} \)

By \( \{\mathit{Ydqt}\} \) son of \( s\,\wl \) son of \( \{\mathit{Hrt}\} \)

Apparatus Criticus:
RVP: \( l\ yd(\text{'}t)\ bn\ s\,\wn\ bn\ \mathit{hrt} \) J\SafN p. 100: \( l\ ydht\ bn\ s\,\wl\ g\mathit{hrt} \) "By \( Ydht\) son of \( s\,\wl\). Distressful yeart".

Commentary:
The circle of the fourth letter is rather large to be an \( \mathbf{\text{'}} \) and there is a line with a hook going through the middle. The first \( n \) is copied as a dot and the second as a line. The two arms of the first letter of the third name are joined together. It is possible it should be read as a \( \mathbf{h} \).

Provenance:

RVP: As the above except there is no indication that the copy is doubtful after the \( b \). JRISB p. 278: points out that the name ‘s\,\,t\,l\,k occurs in this text and is not new as claimed by ISB.

Commentary:
The copies of \( r \) and \( b \) are doubtful and there is possibly a further letter before the \( q \).

Commentary:
The rock is damaged after the third ḥ and the following three letters are difficult to read from the photograph. It seems most likely that the first letter after the second occurrence of 'l should be read as a k as there is no second prong. The r at the end is doubtful as there are abrasions.

Apparatus Criticus:
ThNSSMAS 7: whblt bn hbl w [b][n][y] ThSMJ 6: whblt bn hbl w [b][n][y]

Commentary:
The beginning of the inscription is damaged. No initial ʿl is visible and the first letter read is a circle but no crossbar is visible. The first letter of the second name is a different shape to the previous ʿba in the text and it seems unlikely it should be read as a s. It is a short straight line with a horizontal line sticking out. It could be a d or possibly a z in the Hismaic form of that letter. The third letter of the name is a line with a hook. The previous ʿl does not have a hook and it seems most likely the letter should be read as a r.

Commentary:
One prong of the second ʾ is doubtful. The end of the second name is difficult to interpret. There is a dot near the tail of the y which is read as a n by TNSSMAS and then there is a curve which does not seem to closed in the photograph with a dot inside it. TNSSMAS reads the letter as a circle with a dot and transliterates it as a g. It is more likely it be read as a b and a n.

Reference:

URL: http://krc.orient.ox.ac.uk/ociana/corpus/pages/OCIANA_0018415.html

Commentary:
The second letter is rather large and it is possible that it should be read g. The last two letters of the second name are very doubtful. There might be a ș with no spine and a dot for the loop after the h and it is possible that there is a y following it although its shape would be more accurately represented in ThNS than in ThNSSMAS. The reading of the second name as it appears on the copy is difficult. The name Ḥṣy seems to be attested only once in Thamudic C (Winnett and Reed 1973: 203 c).

Commentary:
The second letter is more like a b and the third is larger and presumably a r. From the photograph it seems clear that the letter after the second n is a y and then there appears to be a short line which is probably an l as the initial l is quite short. The following letter might be an ' but one prong is uncertain and then there appears to be a š without a spine although one line is doubtful and it is possible it should be read as a y. The following two letters are only partially in the photograph and the w read by the publications does not appear to be there at all. The first of the partial letters has loop and a line and it might be a y or a t it is unlikely to be a š if the reading of a spineless š is correct. The next letter is probably a d although part of the line is missing.

Apparatus Criticus:
ThNSSMAS 19: “bd{w}d” for “bdwd” ThNSMS 3: l 'bdwd bn ḥlf bn s¹fr bn zdt

Commentary:
The reading of the first name is clear. The first letter of the third name is written on a curve in the direction of the text and it is rather ambiguous as to whether it should be read as a z or a s¹. The next letter is a f and the following letter is almost certainly a b judging by the other b's in the text and the shape of the r in ThSaf 18. Both zfb and sfb would be difficult to explain as names and it seems possible that the b is dittography which the author did not erase when he decided it would be better to write the b with the following n slightly above the end of ThSaf 18.

l q{l}{m}t bn ʾ{l}nt w ---- {b}ny w h ḫ ds²r ----

By (Qlmt) son of ʾlnt and ---- {b}ny and O ḫ ds²r ----

Apparatus Criticus:
ThNSSMAS: as ThNSM.III ThNSM.III 8: l qlmt bn ʾkn t w ---- w X X y X h wd X X X

Commentary:
The reading of the first name is very difficult. The second l is a very long line and the letter read as a m is facing away from the direction of the text. It is possible it is the correct reading but the lines do not seem to be completely joined. The second letter of the second name is most likely ʾa ḫ although the fork is rather damaged. The letters between the first ʾw and possible ʾb are damaged but traces are visible. The ḫ before the deity’s name is written to the side of the following ḫ and the rest of the prayer seems to be damaged by a chip.

By Wsʔkt son of B’dd son of ġlm} ----

Apparatus Criticus:
ThNSSMAS: as ThNSUS ThNSUS 2.1: "ġlm’d” at end.

Commentary:
There are three loop shapes after the second l and it looks as though the original letters have been tampered with. It is possible the first is a m and then there might be a b and n that have been joined together. The last loop might be a m with a further letter which has been hammered over and joined to it. The last name is rather doubtful. The penultimate letter is rather shorter than the other l’s and it is possible it should be read as a n. The last letter if that is what it is is lightly scratched unlike the rest of the text which...

Wādī Gharah, ridge north of Ġisr Umm Rāmiḥ, Rif Dimashq, Syria
The inscriptions were found on the ridge N. of the ġısr (a simple causeway over which the water flows when the wadi is in flood), on the gently sloping right bank of the Wādī Gharah, which is not very deep at this point. There are a number of graves and cairns (one with two "columns" of stones), near some of which inscriptions were found. C, following Dunand, divides these inscriptions into those from "the right bank of Wādī al-Ghara" (C 189-247) and those from "the right bank of Wādī Ghara near the bridge" (C 248-291). We discovered texts from both groups within the same small area on the right bank just upstream of the bridge.

lḥṣ't bn s'krn bn grm'l w wgm 'l- 'bgr ḏ- ṭ df s'nt ngy whbʾl hdy

By Ḥṣ’t son of S’krn son of Grm’l and he grieved for ‘bgr of the lineage of ḏ the year that Whbʾl the leader (?) escaped

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: translation of s’nt ngy whbʾl hdy "the year Whbʾl rescued Hdy"

Al-Jallad translation: By Ḥṣ’t son of S’krn son of Grm’l and he grieved for ‘bgr of the lineage ḏ the year Whbʾl was announced commander.

Commentary:
Safaitic hdy has been tentatively translated as "leader", to be connected with the Arabic root hdy "to guide." It occurs in similar contexts in KRS 25; KRS 303; KRS 995; KRS 1024; KRS 1086; WH 575; WH 1859, etc. One difficulty with this interpretation is that the word lacks definite concord with its antecedent; in other words, the article is missing. We should expect h- hdy rather than simply hdy. Perhaps this suggests the title was lexicalized without the article, but more evidence is required before this position can be accepted.

Apparatus Criticus:
WH 22: translation of nm as "lice", in connection with Arabic namʾ, lice.

Commentary:
The penultimate letter is clearly n on the photograph despite a small circular abrasion at one end. [MCAM]
WH's interpretation of nm is unconvincing, as there is no evidence for the general loss of the glottal stop in Safaitic. Instead, it might be better to interpret it as an adverbial accusative of the root nw, "to sleep, rest, die," probably *baʾisʾa nawm.

By Sṣrb son of ḥbb son of Nṣ²wn in the spacious pasture

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: This spacious pasture belongs to Sṣrb son of ḥbb son of Nṣ²wn

Commentary:
M.C.A. Macdonald (Burial between the Desert and the Sown, Damaszener Mitteilungen 15 2006:294-295) argues against the notion of the ownership of immovable property in desert societies. The SD translation renders the phrase "h- rʿy h- rḥb" as a locative expression, which could, in theory, continue the Proto-Semitic locative case *-un, reflexes of which are found in the Classical Arabic prepositions baḍu 'yet', etc. Given the limitations of the orthography, this suggestion is impossible to prove at this point.

l mhbt bn ḫ’yln
By Mhbt bn {Ḥyn}

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: {ḥ}yn for {ḥ}yn

Commentary:
The fourth letter is identical in shape to the b of bn. A dot attached to its back (making it look like a s²) is of a different texture to the rest of the letter and is probably accidental. The name mhbt is found in another (unpublished) text from the H4 area. The middle stroke of the ḥ is shorter than the other two, is off centre, and protrudes beyond the back. At first sight it is tempting to read the name as 'byn but this does not explain the middle stroke in the letter. [MCAM].

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: w ḫṛṣ h-ḥl "and he was on the lookout for the horses"
SadF p. 46: w ḫṛṣ h-ḥl - "and he dressed the wound of ḫl" (waʿamal jarḥan l-ḥl (kaʿ-ʿamal ʿilāj)); or "he offered h-ḥl" (wa ʿamal ʿilāj ḫl).

By W'y son of Bny son of Ns²⁻¹i and O Ylt nq't to him who effaces this inscription

Commentary:
The meaning of nq't is uncertain. WH connect it with Classical Arabic naj'at "evil eye" but there are no other instances of Arabic /j/ corresponding to Safaitic /q/. Rodinson (Arabica 6, 1959, pp.217-218) connects it with Akkadian naqû/neqû 'to pour out libations to the dead', 'to scatter dust on the head as a sign of mourning', but this hardly seems to fit the present context. The final two letters are spaced about twice as far from each other than the others.

l ḥr‘t bn wqr w wgm ḥ-ḥbb

By ḥr‘t son of Wqr and he grieved for Ḫbb

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: "and he grieved for a loved one"

Commentary:
Here, ḥbb is either an undefined noun "a loved one" or a personal name (cf. Arabic Ḥabīb). In other texts, we find wgm ‘l ḥbb -ḥ “he mourned for his beloved” or ḥbb f ḥbb "one loved one after another", in which case ḥbb is clearly a noun. In the present text, however, it seems unlikely that the author would be vague about the person he was grieving for (by leaving the noun indefinite), especially given the vast number of texts in which the person(s) grieved for is/are named. Thus, it seems more probable that ḥbb is a personal name.

In Classical Arabic the root ḏ-ḵ-ṛ can be used of anything “hard, tough, severe, difficult”, etc. and in this text there is no indication of what it refers to. The expression b- ḍkr occurs in a number of Safaitic texts but so far not in contexts where the meaning is absolutely clear.

WH 79

Corpus of Safaitic inscriptions
Apparatus Criticus:
WH: hnn "and show pity" for hll

Commentary:
WH reads the verb in this inscription as an imperative. It is more likely a third person singular as imperatives usually follow a subject introduced by the vocative h-. Moreover, the final two strokes of this word are rather elongated, virtually identical in length to the /l/ in (ḥ)lm, suggesting that we should read the verb as hll. The expression "PN and he camped X" is very common while "PN and he showed mercy X" is unknown.

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: mʿll for mʿly; "O Ḫḍy, avenge [him]

Commentary:
WH take "nqm" as an imperative verb "avenge!", but the absence of a pronominal suffix makes this interpretation unlikely. It is more likely a nominal direct object of a gapped verb (see Wright vol II, p.72). the third l of the inscription is clearly a y on the photograph.

Commentary:
WH connect the verb "ḍrk" with Arabic daruka "to be needy". The problem with this interpretation is that it does not account for the name of the deity Ḫḍy, which appears to be disconnected from the rest of the
The Hebrew cognate of Arabic ḍr, ṣārak "have need of", is a better semantic match for the Safaitic. Ṭdy, then, should be read as the noun meaning "favour" rather than as the name of the deity. Ṭdy, "[divine] favour" in invocations, is very common in Dadanitic.

Commentary:
Underneath the s¹ is a curved line that resembles half of an s¹. It is much too wide to justify WH's interpretation of it as a b, and its position casts further doubt on their reading. l ẓnʾl bn rgl w ḡzd
By Ẓnʾl son of Rgl and he was alone while raiding

Commentary:
The syntax of this inscription suggests that we should take ḡzd as a verb. WH connect it to Classical Arabic wahada/wahuda 'to be alone'. In this case, it is unlikely that ḡzd is also a verb, as serial suffix conjugation constructions are unknown. Instead, we read ḡzd as a verbal noun, 'raiding', functioning as a circumstantial accusative.

WH 135

I qny ḥl t qbl ʾḥl sʿlm fnngy
By Qny so O Lt [grant] acceptance to the family of S¹lm so that we may be saved

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: "...and let us escape"

Commentary:
The phrase qbl l ḥl can be interpreted in two ways: (1) qbl1- ḥl, where the second l is a dative preposition or (2) as the reduplicated form, qbl. Qbl is common in Safaitic, and should probably be connected to Classical Arabic iqbal, iqbiyl. The reduplicated form can take a direct object, MKWS 8: w s¹lm w qbl ḏ ḥb, or govern a prepositional phrase, AbNSJ 1: w s¹lm w qbl l- ḥb, with no apparent difference in meaning. It might also be the case that instances without the overt expression of the dative simply reflect assimilation with the final l of qbl. The verb nngy is likely the passive of the subjunctive, nungaya. The use of the subjunctive following the conjunction f- expresses the result or effect of the preceding clause, which must have an imperative, wish, or something equivalent in meaning, e.g.: Classical Arabic iġfir lī yā rabbi fa-‘adhula al-ǧannata ‘pardon me, O my Lord, so that I may enter Paradise’ (Wright, Ar. Gr., vol. II §15.d). This explanation is also more phonologically satisfying, since the final y requires an original word final triphthong. WH's reading suggests that the verb was a jussive, which would have either terminated in a short vowel or a diphthong, both of which would not show up in the orthography.

Apparatus Criticus:

WH: ‘...He passed quickly through the new growth (which) he ate and was satisfied (or through ha-Īls¹)’

Commentary:

WH’s interpretation of ‘f as ‘new growth’ comes from comparison with the Classical Arabic expressions, ‘anf al-matar ‘the first vegetation produced by rain’ and ‘anf al-mar’a ‘the first of the herbage or pasture’, with the assimilation of the /n/ in Safaitic. Since /ls¹/ can be connected to Classical Arabic lassa ‘to eat, graze’, one could be tempted to interpret the two words as constituting a construct chain, ‘f-īls¹ ‘first pasture (?)’.

The definite article in the first term, however, makes this unlikely. The reading of ls¹ as a verb ‘to eat, graze’ is also difficult from a syntactic point of view, as we would expect either a conjunction or relative pronoun to connect it with the rest of the sentence. A close inspection of the photograph reveals that there is an unread t between the third ‘ and the following f. This produces the rather awkward sequence ‘Īls¹. The length (5 consonants) and the final s¹ could suggest that it is an attempt to approximate a Greco-Roman personal name or toponym, but which one exactly is unclear.

WH: translation of narrative "and he camped (returning) from the Nabataeans."
SIAM I pp. 114-115: on the translation of m.
MNBS p. 111 n. 66: on Knauf and references to nbṭ; w ḥll m- nbṭ - and he camped on account of the Nabataeans.

Commentary:
WH point out that 'min' can be used in Arabic to mean 'on account of'; see Wright, Ar. Gr., Vol. II § 48c-d. WH’s translation assumes that the verb 'returning' has been gapped, which is syntactically unlikely.

l frhz bn kmd w trd mn hnr f r'y kll 'rd

By Frhz son of Kmd and he was driven (out) of (the) Hrn so he pastured in every region

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: Translation of narrative "He drove [camels] from the Ḥaurān and pastured [them] in every region."
MNH p. 340: w trd mn- hrn f r'y kll' rd - and he was driven away from the Ḥawrān and so pastured in every region; p. 342 on being driven from the Ḥawrān.

Commentary:
The meaning of kll is 'each, every' when governing an singular indefinite noun (Wright, Ar. Gr., Vol. II §82.d). WH reading of trd as an active verb with a gapped object is unlikely. While the gapping of verbs is common, gapped objects are far rarer, and, aside from this ambiguous case, unknown with the verb trd (see KhBG 8; KhBG 257; KhBG 403; WH 3049; BTH 228; LP 732). Thus, we take trd as a passive verb, 'was driven (out)'. The same double meaning, to drive animals and to drive away, occurs in Arabic. This would also explain why the author had to pasture in other regions.

Commentary:

A "baliyya" was a particular form of grave where the deceased’s camel was trussed and/or hamstrung and left to die either beside the grave or in a pit next to it, to provide the dead man with a suitable mount in the afterlife. Such graves have been found in southern Jordan (where a Nabataean inscription actually specifies that it was a baliyya) and in eastern Arabia. [MCAM]

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: offer no translation of "...ʾlm qdm nʾbn"

Commentary:
We translate /ʾlmqdmnʾbn/ as an epithet of Rdw similar to the ʾālim-epithets of Allāh, Q35:38 ʾālimu ʿgaybi l-samawāt wal-ʾardī ‘all-knowing of the unseen of the heavens and the earth’; Q59:22 ʾālimu l-ʾgaybi wali-šahādati ‘all-knowing of the unseen and seen’. We connect nʾb to the Classical Arabic verb ʾanāba, ‘to repent, to draw close’ (ʾanāba ʾilā ʾallāh). In this case, nʾbn is likely a participial form, perhaps *nāʾib, with a sound masculine plural suffix. The first /m/ of WH’s qdm is better read as a relative pronoun, *mā, followed by the verb qdm, which, in the D-stem, means ‘to offer up, present’. This epithet invites comparison with Qurʾānic verses in which Allāh affirms that he knows who indeed is a hypocrite and who is sincere, e.g.: Q4:63 ʾulāʾika l-ladīna yaʾlamu llāhu mā fī qulūbihim...’and those are the ones of whom Allah knows what is in their hearts’.

Commentary:
Ḥfg occurs here and in ISB 113 and KRS 1836. A member of the Ahl al-Jabal, who inhabit the harrah of southern Syria and north-eastern Jordan, identified a plant of the harrah shown him by Geraldine King as ḥafaḡ. Dr. Sue Colledge later identified it from a photograph as Diplotaxis Harra. The verb rʿy takes a direct object in Safaitic regardless of whether the latter refers to the food or the place.

l kmd bn s²{k}r bn [n]ṣrʾl bn zbdy w wgdʿ l r kmd f ngʾ

By Kmd son of (S²lr) son of (Nṣrl) son of Zbdy and he found the inscription of Kmd and suffered

Commentary:
There are two possible etymologies for ngʾ. The first connects it with Ethiopic, nagwʿa 'shout, be broken, break' and Hebrew, ngaʾa 'touch, hurt', which has a niphal form, meaning 'to be stricken, defeated in battle', and a puʿal, meaning 'to be stricken by diseases' (BDB, p.619). The second connects it with Arabic waǧiʿa 'suffer pain, agony (physical and emotional)'. The verb naǧaʿa in Arabic means 'to be useful', which hardly fits this context. Van den Branden (al-Machriq 63 [1969], p.738, n.1) interprets ngʾ as the VII form, the n-stem, of waǧaʿa. WH point out that there are no l-w n-stem verbs in Arabic and claim that the same is probably true for Safaitic. There is, in fact, no reason to assume that this restriction held in Safaitic, as l-w n-stem verbs are common elsewhere in Semitic, including many Arabic dialects. In fact, the n-stem of the verb waḡʾ fits nicely in the context of this inscription. The proto-Central Semitic form would have been *nawgaʿa (cf. Hb. nūlaḏa 'was born' < *nawlada), which would appear in Safaitic orthography as ngʾ.

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: "He fought against ḤRT in revenge for the she-camel [taken] from Maʾn"

Commentary:
WH connect tbl with Arabic tabl 'vengeance', but ṭr or qṣṣ are more frequent in Safaitic. Tbl should instead be connected to the Akkadian verb wabālum 'to bring, carry'. It is presumably the infinitive of the D-stem, wabbaḷa > tabwil. The word 'ḥil 'dromedary' might be derived in some way from this root. WH take Ḥrt as the name of a tribe on the basis of its appearance with a nisba ending in WH 424, but the nisba ending could equally suggest that it is a toponym.

By Nwł son of ʾml and O ṟbd grant to the petitioner his request

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: nḥṭ for nf{ḥ}t; translation of nḥṭ "his gift"

Commentary:
The photograph reveals that the third to last letter is in fact a d; the two horizontal lines are clear and the left vertical intersecting line is also clear. The right vertical line is worn, but can still be made out. The root nfḍ in Arabic has the sense of shaking or knocking, and can refer to a range of things, from the fallen fruit of the tree to a women having many children (Lane 2832). The context of this inscription makes it clear that nfḍt refers to the object of the petitioner’s request, but anything more exact is impossible to determine. Our current interpretation also differs from WH’s reading in terms of syntax. WH take s¹ʾl nf{ḥ}t- h [sic] as a genitive construction and l- h as the dative preposition with a clitic 3ms pronoun. We think it makes more sense to regard h- s¹ʾl as a definite noun, the dative object of whb, as it is difficult to make sense of what an alleged "petition of his request" should mean. The suffix pronoun on the final word also rules out interpretations that involve general petitions for things, such as petitions for offspring, agricultural produce, etc.

Commentary:

What WH take as an f looks more like a k on the photograph, but admittedly one reminiscent of Thamudic B. WH’s r is in fact the lower half of an f, the upper half of which is damaged but easily made out from on the photo. Kf is attested in KRS 1866, with the meaning of "to overturn". This meaning does not fit the current context, as it would seem odd for the author to request deliverance from "the overturner". Rather, we would connect kf with palm, cf. Arabic kaff, and treat the phrase idiomatically as one who has evil in his hand, i.e., one who possesses evil.

WH 215

ḥzwyyḥ

Ḥzwyyḥ

Commentary:
If this is indeed a name, it is previously unattested in Safaitic. The word lends itself to many interpretations. One is tempted to connect the first component to Hebrew and Aramaic ḥāzā, “to see”, but the occurrence of Arabic ḥāzā “to see with inner vision, of an astrologer”, complicates the matter, as Safaitic ḥ does not correspond regularly with Arabic h. Given the root’s restricted sense in Arabic, however, it could very well be a borrowing from Aramaic, which could explain the aberrant correspondence. The final two letters could be the theophoric element yāhū. Indeed, names such as hazāyā (Neh 11:5); hazʾel (2 Kings 8:8,13,16) etc. occur in the Bible. The derivation of a putative ḥzwyy ḫ is difficult to explain. The y may be dittography, in which case, ḥzw could be a suffix conjugation verb or a participle.

l mtl bn ḥr‘t bn wqr nbṭ

By Mtl son of Ḥr‘t son of Wqr well-digger

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: translation of nbṭ, "he dug down to water"

Commentary:
WH correctly connect nbṭ with Arabic, meaning "to dig down to water, or to dig a well", but their interpretation of the word as a finite verb is unsatisfactory. In constructions such as these, Safaitic introduces the narrative with a conjunction, either w or f. The absence of such here suggests to me that the word is part of the name, perhaps a fa‘āl form indicating profession, nabbāṭ "well-digger". One occasionally finds frs¹ "horseman" in the same position.

By ʿḏ son of ʿḏ son of ʾḏ and he journeyed alone from the Ḥrn so 0 S²ḥqm [grant] security

Apparatus Criticus:
MNH p. 340: w mty whdh[h] m-ḥrn f h s²ḥqm s¹lm - and he travelled in haste from the Ḥawrān by himself and so 0 s²ḥqm [grant] security; p. 342: on going to and fro from the Ḥawrān.

WH: parse whd[y] as w ḵdy, translation of ḵdy as "to urge (camels) forward by singing".

Commentary:
We find MNH’s interpretation of whd[y] as an adverb meaning “alone, by himself” more convincing than WH’s translation. Whd[y] probably consists of the nisba ending -yy attached to the base whd “one”. It is, however, unclear if a vowel, -a or -ā, follows this suffix. Note that if this interpretation is correct, it differs significantly from its Classical Arabic equivalent, wahda-hu “by himself”.

\[ l 'brd bn td' \]

By \( 'brd \) son of \( Td' \)

Commentary:

There is a lightly scratched vertical line following the first \( t \) which intersects with its horizontal line. If this mark was intentional, it would appear that there are two consecutive \( t \)’s following \( n \). This interpretation is tempting as it would render the second word \( bnt \) "daughter" rather than \( bn \). Etymological \( bnt \)- is, as far as I know, always spelled in Safaitic as \( bt \), with the assimilation of the \( t \) so the preservation of etymological \( n \) might support the view that the line in question is a stray mark.

lʿs¹ bn ḥfyt h- bkrt w hwb h- mrʾt

The she-camel is by ʿs¹ son of Ḥyft and he fornicated with this woman

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: Translation of hwb "he loved"
Commentary:
In most cases, ḥwb is clearly one of the terms for grieving in Safaitic, but both the semantic and syntax context (the object is not introduced by a preposition) make it such an interpretation here difficult. WH connect it to Arabic ḥbb "to love", but without any phonological justification. Another sense of ḥwb is to "sin" or "commit a sin", cf. Arabic ḥāba (Lane 662). In this context, it most likely refers to illicit sexual relations. A dancing woman, perhaps a representation of the author’s sexual partner, accompanies the inscription. Curiously, no representation of a she-camel accompanies the inscription.

By Ṽṣb son of Ṽws¹r

Commentary:
On the photograph and facsimile (pl. 14) but not read by WH who however refer to the text they call 604 as 604a on p. 31. Beeston (BRWH p. 134) suggests calling the unread text 604 and the read one 604a. However this would add confusion so it seems simpler to call the one WH read 604a (as on p. 31) and the unread one as 604b. Beeston reads the first name in 604b as Ṽḥbb which is impossible.

By Fty son of Rdw and he spent the night in this fertile land and lived at ease amidst spring vegetation and deliver him from Lḥyn this year.

Apparatus Criticus:
WH 641.1: "he pitched a tent in this land and lived at ease amidst spring vegetation. [O god], deliver him from moving away this year"

{r}ḥyl for lḥyn(h)

Commentary:
L r and n are carefully distinguished in this text. L always has a right-angled hook at one end; r is always a shallow curve with no hooks; and n is a straight line with no hooks. The reading must therefore be b-bql and m-lḥyn even though the n is rather long. ṭd here probably means "land that becomes luxuriant in herbage" cf Arabic ṣarid (Lane 49a) For ṭḥ see WH 597. No deity is invoked in the prayer for deliverance. Since elsewhere ( BRenv A2, B1), the tribe of Lḥyn is referred to as ṣlḥyn (i.e. "the lineage group of Lḥyn") and lḥyn can be a personal name in Safaitic, it seems likely that lḥyn in this inscription is a person rather than a group.

Commentary:
Contra MCAM’s earlier suggestion it is unlikely that 1040 is the continuation of 1039 because 1039 has left a gap in the middle of the first name where 1040 crosses it which implies that 1040 was written first.

l ḍt bn ḫṯ bn ḫk̲nf bn m̲ql bn nbʾt w w̲gd ʃfr ʾm -h f wgm

By Dʿṯ son of ḫṯ son of ḫk̲n̲f son of M̲ql son of Nbʾt and he found the inscription of his grandfather and he grieved [for him]

Commentary:
L and n are very clearly distinguished in this text with many of the l’s being of exceptional length. Although WH read the second name as n̲ġft comparison of the first letter with the n of bn shows that it must be a l.
The fifth name ḫ̲kf is unattested and could be a dialectal variant of ng̲ft. This is supported by the fifth name where again comparison with the n of the preceding bn shows that it must be nbʾt in place of the usual lbʾt.

Commentary:
The third and penultimate letters have a clear curve at the top which the lām auctoris does not. They are therefore probably to be read as r. Rare names with clear final ' do occur (e.g qdm' in MST 1) so it may not be “an unintentional mark” as suggested by WH.

By {Klb} son of ṭfrn

Commentary:
Vandalised by additions. The dots are probably forms of ”joining" the letters as is the line between the lām auctoris and the next letter. This may have been a k one bar of which was extended into a circle. We suggest that the b of bn was traned into a w. Since the l’s are not hooked the penultimate letter must be a r.

WH 1756

lʾs¹ḥr bn ʾgmδ w ḥwb

By ʾs¹ḥr son of Ġmd and he wept with grief

Commentary:
It appears that the original text was lʾṣḥr ḥwb and that bn ʾgmδ was added later. The n and m are tiny in relation to the other letters and the n and m are scratched rather than direct hammered.

By lyb son of H---- Z’r son of ‘dd of the lineage of ----’m and he pastured BHM the year that Lhg rescued RYT (or KYT). And O Ds²r [grant] security and protection

Commentary:
NB b and r seem to be identical in the first part of the text but the shapes of r in r’y ds²r and hgr differ considerably. Thus it is difficult to decide whether b- h.m.t or r’h.m.t should be read. The copy has shading between the m and t of this word but if the spacing is accurate there is only room for one thin letter at most.

By Whblh son of Zn¹l son of Whblh son of Mlk and he built the shelter for Hn¹ and he tracked a horseman to the MS¹TY the year the tribe of Ḍf was cut to pieces. And, Lt [grant] security and there returned into the camp a hundred horses

Apparatus Criticus:
MNH p. 347: on Greek inscription; n. 288: might be the father of the author in WH 1861.

Commentary:
A study of the original stone shows that the fourth name is mlk (rather than mll as read by WH) and indeed it is shown as such on WH's facsimile (Pl. 70). The word bhr is new. WH read it as btr but this is impossible since the text is very carefully written with the height of the letters maintained at a constant level and a clear distinction preserved between signs of the same form but different sizes (g/ʿ l/n h/t). The letter in question is far larger than any of the t’s in the inscription and can only be a ḫ. The meaning however is obscure.

Commentary:
Unfortunately the inscription was inked in white before it was photographed and this has obscured the reading. The last two letters of the second name which were not inked can be seen on the photograph. The sign before ‘s²rq which WH read as f is inaccurately represented on their facsimile and is probably a w though there are some unexplained additional lines around the letter.

Apparatus Criticus:

Commentary:
Unfortunately the letters have been covered with white ink sometimes obscuring their true shape. This particularly true of the end of the case where the whole of mzl can be seen on the stone although the m has been transformed into ll by the ink.

By Mṣrm son of Mṣrm and he migrated to the encampment of Hn' in the inner desert

Commentary:
On the photograph it is clear that the second name is nzl not ntn (as read by WH). The line before ms²rt has a definite curve at one end like the b’s of the bn’s whereas the lām auctoris and the l of nzl are straight. It must therefore be a b. The supposed l before mdbr is a small scratch above the foot of the ‘of hn’. Mdbr must represent the equivalent of what in Standard Arabic would be an adverbial accusative.

$l ’n’m bn s²hm bn ġt w bny h- s’trt l- hn’ hdy s¹nt msr ’lwbb’il- gr{s²}$

By ’n’m son of $S²hm$ son of $Ġt$ and he [helped] build the fortified encampment for $Hn$ the commander the year of the expeditionary force of ’l Whb’il to Gerasa.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIAM p. 196; first name ’n’m.

Commentary:
Both ’n’m and ġt are clear on the stone. It is possible that $s’trt$ represents some form of military structure if $hdy$ is the leader of a military unit. It is also tempting to connect $msr$ with the South Arabian $msr$ ‘expeditionary force’ — from the root $ṣyr$ — (cf. JRWH p. 500). If this is so [and other instances of $msr$ need to be checked] the $msr$ ’lwbb’il would presumably a unit drawn from the ’l Whb’il comparable to the ms’t’rt ’mt in M .... Finally it is impossible to decide whether the more lightly scratched lower lines of the last letter are accidental in which case the sign is a for intentional in which case it is a $s²$. In the latter case the temptation to identify grs² as Gerasa/Jerash is almost irresistible. The translation offered above is based on all these hypotheses and can be no more than a tentative suggestion on which much more work would need to be done before publication.

The first letter of the second name is almost certainly a ' but a light scratch of a different texture to the rest of the letter crosses one of the forks. Commentary:
The top of the second letter has been damaged and it is not certain whether it is a 'aṣ or a h. The m of the second name has been filled in with careful pecking. The position of the k is curious. It does not seem to have been omitted and then inserted since there is space enough for it between the m and the b. Although the second name is bizarre it is clear on the photograph. In this name the fifth letter (a straight vertical line) is clearly differented from the second and fourth letters (straight vertical lines with a curve at the top). The fifth can only be a 1 which suggests that the second and fourth must be r’s. The first three letters of the text are more crudely formed than the rest and this may account for the differences between on the one hand the lām auctoris and the r of ’rs¹(y) and on the other the r’s and l of the second name.

Commentary:
Several letters have been altered and the second has been erased. It is possible that the third has been transformed from a l into a r and the bar of the w appears to have been hammered over though traces of it can still be seen. The following letter has been thoroughly hammered over but from the traces still visible it may have been a h. In the patronym forks have been hammered over the bases of the second and third letters Neither can have been a b which the bn shows to have been much more squat. The first could have been a l similar to the lām auctoris in which case the third may have been a r.

Several letters have been tampered with but fortunately the additions stand out clearly from the original letters. The two h’s have been turned into y’s and the d into a q. I bnyt bn mhm b(n) bdn bn ṛ bn ṣn bn ḫrm bn ṭwḍ b(n) gm’s¹ h- nfs¹t

By Bnyt son of Mhm (son of) Bdn son of ṛ son of ṣn son of ḫrm son of ṭwḍ (son of) Gm’s¹ is the monument

Commentary:
WH's facsimile is very inaccurate. The 8th letter cannot be g as read by WH nor ġ since it is followed by h (cf. the h of hr'n). It can only be a m therefore. Each of the 3 m's in this text is of a quite different shape. The n of the second bn is larger than the others and is surmounted by a small fork which is presumably accidental though it looks intentional. There is a wavy line to the left of the n of the final bn which is of a slightly different quality from the n.

\[ l\text{d'}y\ bn\ s²\text{wkt}\ w\ ḥwy(t) (h-\) s²\text{rt} \]

By D’y son of S² wkt and Sirius set but had brought no rain.

Commentary:
WH’s interpretation seems unlikely. However NB in Arabic ḥawâ and ḥawwâ can mean (the stars) set aurorally and brought no rain (Lane 827/b) while al-ṣiʿrâ is Sirius. There are 2 stars of this name called the sisters of Suḥayl. However al-ṣiʿrâ is said to rise around 27 June (El sv a-ṣiʿrâ) or in the time of intense heat (Lane 1560 b-c) or rules for 40 nights in Jan/Feb in a-ṣiʿrâ (Musil Rwala p. 8). I cannot find whether the 2 stars with this name rise at opposite ends of the year. If so and Musil’s statement is correct for one of them the statement in the inscription would be a complaint that winter had passed without bringing rain.

l m(f)ny bn tm w r'y h- rġlt nwy

By Mfny son of Tm and he pastured the meadows while migrating

Commentary:
The third letter could also be a ǧ but in that case it would be the mirror image of the later ǧ. Rġlt is probably a plant either rojeyla (Atriplex dimorphostegia K.K.) the "raw stalks or tuberous growths" of which the Rwala eat (Musil Rwala 95) or rogol (Atriplex leucoclada Boiss) a perennial of the class of plants called hamz which make the best camel pasture (Musil Rwala p. 337-338). The diagonal line which seems to join the ǧ to the l is probably accidental.

\[l mgot bn s^1mm bn ns^2d^1l bn (b)[(]hm bn \text{́}mr\]

By \(mgot\) son of \(s^1mm\) son of \(ns^2d^1l\) son of \((hm)\) son of \(mr\)
Commentary:
The third name is clearly ns₂dʾl. The first letter of the fourth name could be a k but it is not certain whether or not the stroke to the side is part of the letter. The author originally wrote the fourth name {b}m omitting the h. He then scratched over the m and wrote h above it and continued the text at the level of the h. It was this that led WH to divide it into two texts.

By ʾs¹r son of ḫdmt and he pastured the {goats} for the first time during the cosmical setting/full moon of Scorpio, so, O Yʾtʾ, may he be secure, and blind him who would efface this writing.

Apparatus Criticus:

Provenance:

By ʾrbšn son of ḫt son of {Š²ḥyt} son of {Mkmð}

Commentary:
The very light line across the second letter is almost certainly natural. The fourth letter is clearly a b (cf. the bʾs in the bnʾs) so the third must be a r. The apparent central line across the tenth letter is a small ridge on the stone. After the second bn the rest of the text is invisible on the photograph.

By Mġyr son of Ṣʿd son of Sʿḥr son of Mfny and he migrated to the inner desert and he found the inscription of (Mfny) and cried out because of heavy loss

Commentary:
There are some faint letters on the side of the stone immediately after the mf of the second mfny. WH omitted the m of the second mfny and their restoration [mf]ny is based on their reading of WH 953 where it is probably metathesis on the part of either the author or the copyist.

(q)ṣ’y bn wd bn ys²kr bn ‘wd bn (y)s²kr w ḥḍr s’nt ws¹-­‐-

By (Qṣ’y) son of Wd son of Ys²kr son of ‘wd son of (Ys²kr) and he was present [here] in the year of want

Commentary:
Although first letter of the fifth name is clearlyḏ on the copy the emendation seems justified not only because of the occurrence of ys²kr already in the genealogy but because names with pre-fromative ḍ-­‐ are virtually unknown in Safaitic (the only example seems to be ḍ-my’t in WH 154).

Commentary:
The same names are engraved three times in different techniques on the same face. WH treat them all as 2272. In the SD they are separated as WH 2272.1 2272.2 2272.3. Note in all three texts the difference between the lām auctoris which has a hook and the final letter which does not and which must therefore be a n even though in 2272.1 and 2272.2 it is somewhat longer than the n of the bn.

l ʾmz bn ʾṭ bn ʾ[ n]ʾl ʿ ʾ dmʾ

By ʾmz son of ʾṭ son of (ʾnʾl). He plaited [his hair]

Commentary:
WH take the first letter of the third name as ʿ and the last sign in the text as g but on the copy they are of identical size. In view of WH 2321 it is likely that the third name should be read ‘nʾl the last sign must therefore be ʿ also. A number of common names are occasionally found with a final -ʾ (e.g. qdm qdmʾ in MST 1). Either the inscription is by two people or the w should be emended to (bn).

---(ʾs¹)d bn ḥʾr---

---(S¹d) son of (Ḥʾr)---
Commentary:
It looks as though the lower part of the penultimate letter is in a different technique from the upper part. On the other hand it is identical to the h. One could read ʾ (taking both parts as intentional) or b (taking only the upper part). However there is a dear fork at the bottom which it makes it unlikely to a k. There are traces of another letter on the edge of the break.

There is a lightly scratched t following the second ʾ, but there is an unusually large space separating the two letters. The last part of the inscription has been badly damaged. Commentary:
WH read two letters wr immediately after the n of bnt and below the t and ḥr(m). If this is correct (and the letters are unidentifiable on the photograph) it seems probable that the author originally forgot the t of bnt and inadvertently dose the left hand side of the b of ḥrm then noticing her mistake continued her text above. By ḫd son of (Ṯṯ) of the (lineage of) Bs and he and his brother were announced [commander] of a party of near kinsmen the year the Nabataeans rebelled against the people of (Rome), so may security come

Apparatus Criticus:
MANC p. 421b: the year the Nabataeans rebelled against the people of Rome MNH p. 331 and n. 17: s²nt mrdt nbṯ 'l- ṭm ·- the year of the revolt of the Nabataeans against the ṭm. MNBS 111 n. 68: s²nt mrdt nbṯ 'l- ṭm; on Knauf and texts mentioning conflicts between the Nabataeans and other peoples.

Commentary:
The f of mnfṯ is clear and so Knauf’s suggestion m mnfṯ is impossible. The r of mnfṯ is different from those of mrdt and ṭm which are completely closed. There does not seem to be a l between the f and the ḫ at the end or between the ḫ and the s¹. The final f looks clear on the photograph and is followed by a deep hole in the rock.

By ‘ṭ’ son of Wʾd was here and he spent the dry season in the harra and he drove off (in a raid) the horses from the Ḥawrān the year (or time) of a flood

Apparatus Criticus:
MST 9 n.53: w qyz ḥrt w ṭrd m-ḥwrn h-ḥl - and he spent the dry season in [the] Harra and he drove the horses from [the] Ḥawrān. MNH p. 314 n. 72 p. 341 and n. 244: w qyz ḥrt w ṭrd m-ḥwrn h-ḥl - and he spent the dry season in the Ḥarra and he drove off (in a raid) the horses from the Ḥawrān; the marks read as s¹nt s¹l are probably not letters; p. 342: on raiding in Ḥawrān from the Ḥarra.

Commentary:
The author wrote a t at the end of the first name and then neatly scratched it over. This could be a sign of the beginnings of uncertainty as to how represent /ṭāʾ marbūṭa/ viz. by -t or by -h. Note also the /ḥwrn/ for the usual /ḥrm/ if this is what it is. There are definitely some very lightly scratched lines at the end of the text but whether they are letters reading s¹nt s¹l is somewhat doubtful.

Commentary:
The first two letters aligned with the third and are just visible on the photograph though they have been missed on the facsimile. The first two letters shown on the latter are in fact natural marks on the rock. The text has been heavily vandalised by the addition of lines to most of the letters. The third letter was probably a g which has been turned into a s the two ‘s have been turned into w’s a thicker horizontal stroke has been added across the top of the n and a side-stroke added to the d.

Commentary:
Both lʾs are strongly curved. WH read the third letter as bd but the two parts are joined and there is no sign on the photograph of the loop of the d shown on the facsimile. The second name could be Ḫrb or Ḫrs¹ though former is more likely.

{l}ʾy bn ʾbdt bn br----
By ʾly son of ʾbdt son of Br

Commentary:
The sixth letter is identical to the second and quite different from the thin short line of n in bn. It therefore must be a ʾ. There is nothing between this ʾ and the preceding b so this must be a clear case of b for bn. The final letter though visible is unintelligible.

WH 3289

l zd n khy w bdr h- ūfny m- ḫrn

By Zd son of Khy and he hastened towards the new growth, having become tired of the Ḥaurān

Apparatus Criticus:
MNH p. 341: w bdr h- ūf ml m- ḫrn - and he hastened towards the new growth having become tired of the Ḥawrān. WH’s translation; p. 342: on going from the Ḥawrān.

Commentary:
The central stroke of the fourth letter is identical in form to the rest of the letter but it is different from the ḥ of khy in that the central stroke does not project. It was presumably an error by the author for b. Ḥ- ūfny ‘the Apamaean’??

l bʾmrh bn gd h- {ẓ}byt

By Bʾmrh son of Gd are the {gazelles}

Commentary:
The loop of the d (though not shown on the facsimile) can be seen on the photograph. The first two letters of the last word have rather odd shapes. They appear to be continuing the 90° stance of the letters in the text with the ẓ which usually stands with its open side at the bottom turned so that the open side is to the right and the b (partially obscured by a large dot) has its open side more or less pointing upwards.

WH 3374

l h[[ ]]d bn ‘kyd

By (H’d) son of ‘kyd

Commentary:
The author originally wrote a ‘ after the h then scratched it out and wrote ‘. This seems to have caused considerable confusion to previous editors. The ‘ is not shown on WH’s facsimile (though there is a space where it should be) but is it included in their reading. They also emend the ’ to ṣ although there is no justification for this since the ’ is clear on the photograph. CSNS (p. 195) adds to the confusion by claiming that this ṣ is a restoration rather than an emendation and that the facsimile (and the entry in HIn p. 605) show the name as h’d whereas in fact both show it as h’d! The second name is clearly ‘kyd on the photograph though y and a d are more lightly scratched than the first two letters.

--- bn \{\(\{y\}\)s\³\lm \{(b)\}\{(n)\}\} \h \cdots g

--- son of \{Ys\³\lm\} \{son of\} H \cdots G

Commentary:
WH read this as the continuation of 3532 but this is very unlikely since the latter is enclosed in a cartouche. The beginning of 3531 is hidden under earth and a stone. The text has been extensively altered. It seems likely that the upper circle of the third visible letter was added later. Unlike the lower one it has been drawn around the bottom of the stem rather than added onto its end. It therefore seems likely that the letter was originally a \(y\). The next letter is a \(s\) with a very lightly scratched line near it. WH took this a spart of the letter and read it as \(h\). The \(l\) and \(m\) of ys\³\lm are clear. The shape of the following sign is suspicious with its flattened right-hand edge and it seems likely that it is a bn the letters of which have been joined and then a cross stroke added to make it into a w. The following sign is 90° \(h\) with the bottom crossed by the line of the cartouche around 3532 and the final sign is clearly a g rather than two l's. What is between the \(h\) and \(g\) is unclear on the photograph.

* l qtl bn ṭrq

By Qtl son of Ṭrq

Commentary:
WH read WH 3531 as a continuation of this text. However 3532 is clearly enclosed in a cartouche and ends with ṭrq. What WH read as the lām auctoris is an extraneous line outside the cartouche and what they take to be the left-hand side of the ‘m’ is in fact the end of the cartouche the right-hand side of the ‘m’ being the true lām auctoris. The r of ṭrq has small but clear hooks though these are not shown on the facsimile. All this can be seen on the photograph.

l mlkt b(n) ḭy bn hl (ḥ-) {(ḥ)-}{(ḥ)}b

By Mlkt {son of} Ḥy son of Ḥl

Commentary:
The text has been much altered and the only the first name is certain. The seventh eighth and ninth letters are obscured by over-scratchings. The fourteenth letter seems to have been altered from a h to a ṭ by the addition of an extra heavier side-stroke. The next sign seems originally to have been a hooked l like that in mlkt but a heavy circle has been added at the other end of the stem and a lighter line joining the end of the hook back to the stem. By contrast the penultimate sign seems to have started off a h but the side strike was then scratched over to make it look like a r. However none of this can be certain.

By Ḥrb son of y’ll and he awaited the rains while camping by permanent water and he had gone to water at Brkt.

Apparatus Criticus:
NAEN I p. 29 38 n. 55: w tżr h- s’my b- ḥḍr w wrd brkt - “ and he waited for rains at a ḥaḍr (i.e. a place by permanent water) and he watered at Brkt ”. MST p. 9 n. 55: as NAEN I.

Commentary:
The text has been tampered with. A horizontal has been added between two of the prongs of the h. The b of bn has been turned into a m but the additional line is in a quite different technique to the original. An extra y has been added just before y’ll in the same technique as the addition to the b. By {Dʾy} son of Bs¹ʾ son of ’s¹ʾd son of Gmr son of Ḫs¹ʾn son of Ḫbk

Commentary:

WH have taken no account of the relative positions of the texts on the rock nor of the differences in technique which characterise them. WH 3807 is lightly scratched and after the fourth bn crosses a break in the rock. The last two names of this text are separated from the other texts on this second piece of rock by a thickly hammered enclosing-line. WH read two of the names (ʾmq bn gmr) from 3809 as the end of 3807 despite the fact that they are incised rather than scratched and are not aligned with the rest of 3807. They then combined the last two names of 3807 (ʾhs¹ʾn bn Ḫbk) with the end of 3809 (bn Ḫbk bn ’mt bn Ḫs¹ʾn) to make a new text ’3897b.’ See the commentary to WH 3809.

l (rj)b’(l) bn ((rj){{b}}((n)j) bn bs¹’ ((b))j((n)j) ((’))j((s¹))j(d)) bn gmr bn ḥbk bn ’mt bn ’hs’n

By {Rbl} son of {Rbn} son of Bs¹’ {son of} {s¹}d son of Gmr son of Ḥbk son of ’mt son of ’hs¹’n

Commentary:
Several letters in the first two names have been vandalised by the addition of lines and the filling in of spaces as can be seen on the photograph where the additions have a different ‘texture’ to the original letters. The second sign was almost certainly a r but the small hook at each end has been enlarged into a circle making the letter resemble a ḩ. The fifth sign was originally a lām to which hooks were later added making it resemble a r. These hooks do not quite join the vertical. The second name has been rendered unintelligible. The first letter was originally a r like that of the first name but its small hooks have been joined by a vertical line giving it the appearance of a g or m. The next sign which has been made to resemble a curious ḡ was originally a bn where one end of the n was very close to one arm of the b. Whoever altered the inscription completely the join and made small extensions to the other ends of the n and b. He also joined the n of the following bn to the b of bs¹’. The b and the n of the bn after bs¹’ have been joined and an extra line added to form what WH took to be a wasm. The text continues across the crack but the letters here are incised rather than chiselled. The first name after the crack has been very skillfully altered. One fork of the ‘h has been joined to make a ṣ. The following letter was originally a s¹ (the firmer semi-circle with a short line protruding from it) but has been turned into a m by the addition of a lighter outer semi-circle. Finally the d has been changed into a q by the addition of a loop on the right side of the stem. Note that the family tree on p. 302 of CSNS should be amended to take account of these corrected readings. The genealogy in this text seems to differ from that in 3807 which runs d(y) bn bs¹’ bn ’s¹’d bn gmr bn ’hs¹’n bn ḥbk.

The letters are shown as clear on the copy but on the photograph it can be seen that they are badly hammered over to the extent that the lām auctoris and the first name form an indecipherable mess. l ṣr(b)/t) bn g’wn bn tmn

By Ṣr/bt son of G’wn son of Tmn

Commentary:
WH read this text as the continuation of 3901. However it is clear from the photograph that they are two separate inscriptions. The beginning of 3902 is obscured by a patch of abrasion and the letters of the first name are therefore very faint and the reading is not entirely certain. There is a line above the third letter of the name which in some lights make it look like a s第七届 but on the rock when it was copied this looked like an extraneous mark above a b. Similarly on some photographs the final letter of the first name looks like a k or a h, whereas on the rock it appeared as a clear t.

Provenance:

Commentary:
The text has been very thoroughly obscured by ligatures and hammering and only the first and the last two letters are certain. What may be the ʾ of the first name can be seen between the ṭ and the b, though this may simply be a ligature. It seems that the two arms of the b have been joined and a line hammered between it and the following n. There seems to be another area of hammering between the n and the f. The latter could also be a s².

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: l ʿmr bn ʿdn h- hdmy "By ʿmr son of ʿdn the Hdmite"

Commentary:
It is clear from the fact that WH cite one of their own photographs, rather than one of Park’s, that this stone is not from Jabal Qurma, which they never visited. It is probably from the immediate vicinity of Qasr Burqū’ whence it was brought to the Amman Museum with other stones from the same area by Professor George Mendenhall in the early 1980s. The diagonal part of the inscription has been scratched over and the arrow of the archer to the right of it enters the crescent of the m (the firmer line below it cannot be the arrow because it is too low in relation to the bow). The scratches and other damage make it extremely difficult to read this section of the text. In Macdonald 1980: 197 it is suggested that dmy here (as in AbaNS 8, 32, and 44) could be a plural of ḏmyt, comparable to Classical Arabic ḏammūt (see Lane 917b). An alternative explanation would be that the author was from the oasis of Dūmah (modern al-Ḡawf) and that h- ḏmy is his ṃisbah, as suggested by Ahmad Al-Jallad in KRS 30. For a comment on the drawing see Macdonald 1993: 328, n. 160. For the presence of the women drawing out their hair see Macdonald 2012: 284.

WH: {l} hb bn ʿs²{b} for {l} {ʾ}bḍ bn ʿ{d}s¹

Commentary:
Note that the author of WH 3921 also claims the animals.

Provenance:
Gabal Qurma, Al-Zarqa’ Governorate, unspecified country.
WH worked from photographs taken by Mr Barry Park in 1955 who gave them to Gerald Lankester Harding. Unfortunately, these have since disappeared, and the photographs here were taken during a survey of Jabal Qurma and Tell Farah by Michael C.A. Macdonald, Geraldine King, Ann Searight and David Jacobson in 1982.

WH 3925 (HYGQ 95)

I 'hm w db’l- nbṭ

By 'hm and he took refuge with the Nabataeans

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: w db’l- nbṭ “and he was on a raid to the Nabataeans”

Commentary:
It seems that db’ without l- almost certainly means “to raid”, since on several occasions it is followed by a prayer for booty (e.g. HaNSB 365, KRS 269, ThSaT 56, WH 2818, 3731, etc.) and in KRS 33 the author says w db’w ḡmn “and he raided and took booty”. However, db’ followed by l- is never associated with references to “booty and it seems that it is more likely to mean “he sought refuge with”, as in Classical Arabic ḍba’ā ilā (Lane 1763a), as suggested in Macdonald 1993: 314, n. 72.

Provenance:
Šabal Qurma, Al-Zarqa’ Governorate, unspecified country.
WH worked from photographs taken by Mr Barry Park in 1955 who gave them to Gerald Lankester Harding. WH 3926

I mgr h- bkrt

By Mgr are the young she-camels

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: “the she-camel” for “the young she-camels”

Commentary:
Since the drawing shows three camels bkrt presumably represents the plural here.

Provenance:
Šabal Qurma, Al-Zarqa’ Governorate, unspecified country.

lṣyb nbNgý

By Ṣʾb {son of} {Ngý}

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: lṣʾb bn nn ....

Commentary:
WH did not publish a facsimile. This reading is taken from the photographs by Geraldine King (colour) and Michael Macdonald (black-and-white). The inscription has been hammered over. The second letter has been altered and originally may have been a ȝ or a ṭ: WH read the fourth letter as a b but it is quite different from the b of the bn which follows it and is more likely to be a r.

Provenance:
Ǧabal Qurma, Al-Zarqā Governorate, unspecified country.
WH worked from photographs taken by Mr Barry Park in 1955 who gave them to Gerald Lankester Harding. Unfortunately, these have since disappeared, and the photographs here were taken during a survey of Ǧabal Qurma and Tell Farah by Michael C.A. WH 3929

lkwkb bn ǧlt ytȝr ḫyt

By Kwkb son of Ġlṭ while lying in wait for animals.

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: ytȝr ḫyt "he was watching animals"
Commentary:
The first two letters of the second name are clearly ǧ l which have been joined at one end and in the middle by a later line which also joins the l to the ṣ. The name is unattested but compare Classical Arabic ǧālīt "one who fights vehemently" (Lane p. 2281b under ǧālīt). The name could also be ǧīlī (compare Classical Arabic ǧālītā "a bitter herb with which one tans" Lane p. 2281b) however given the lack of a connective between the name and the statement it seems more likely that the y belongs to the following verb which would be a circumstance clause (ḥāl) "while he was waiting for some animals".

Provenance:
Gabal Quurma, Al-Zarqa’ Governorate, unspecified country.
WH worked from photographs taken by Mr Barry Park in 1955 who gave them to Gerald Lankester Harding. Unfortunately these have since disappeared, and the photographs here were taken during a survey of Gabal Quurma and Tell Farah by Michael C.A. WH 3930

{l} {g}{t}m bn w rm

{By} {Ǧtm} son of Wrm

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: l rtm for {l} {g}{t}m

Commentary:
WH do not read the l before the first letter of the first name, and interpreted the ǧ as l r. This is certainly a possible alternative reading.

By {m}r {son of} ḫrm{n} and he was on his guard against whoever destroyed [members of the] ḫ Rf’t

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: l ḫmr ḫrm’n ḫ b m‘wr ḫ rt’ "By ḫmr ḫrm’n... the obliterator of the tribe of Rf’t"

Commentary:
The text has been obscured by hammering and the joining of letters. For ḫdr meaning "he was on his guard" compare Classical Arabic ḥaraba (Lane 534a ), and for ‘wr meaning "to destroy" compare Classical Arabic ʿāra ‘he destroyed (something)’ (Lane 2193c).

By Grm son of Gr; (and) he plucked out [his] hair

Commentary:
King (1990: 680) considers that the third letter from the end is a d rather than a m. In the copy can be read a m clearly. Since the text is mixed Safaitic/Hismaic and the personal name mrt is common in Safaitic, we should reject King's reading. The Winnett & Reed's interpretation (1970: 85) comparing mrt to the Arabic maraṭa "to pluck out hair" seems more plausible.

ZeGA 15: "--m bn ġyrʾl sʾnt brh lgyʾn bṣry ktb "-- (Von) ṯohn des ġyrʾl (und er schrieb dies) in dem Jahr in dem die Armee von Bṣry "ktb" verlassen hatte".

Commentary:
There appears to be a small loop after the initial l which might be an ʾ although the technique of inscribing seems to be rather different from that of the other lines of the text. There is then a line which might be a l and then there is a hammer mark just before the m which might cover another letter. The letter read as the first sʾ is rather curved and the second one read as a sʾ is angular with one line shorter than the other. The final letter is more likely to be an l than a b.

lʾs¹lm bn rq{d}{l}t h- bkrt

By ʾs¹lm son of {Rqd lt} is the young she-camel

Commentary:
The text is written round three sides of a drawing of a camel. The second name is very odd if the reading is correct. The root RQD in Classical Arabic means ‘to sleep’ or ‘to be ragged’ neither very suitable for a theophoric name. The first two letters are certain (cf. the minimal circle on the q in ZF 13) but the loop of the d is more lightly incised than the rest of the letter. The l has become joined to the rear foot of the camel. The d-l could represent s¹ or even d but the roots RQS and RQḌ do not seem to exist.

Commentary:
Note that r has only one hook, that ' , h, d have long stems and very small forks, and that ' is a very small dot, whereas g is an elongated oval. K has a square form. The first 3 names are in the 90° script. There is a 9-rayed star and 7 lines above the beginning of the text. There is a symbol of 7 $^h$-like signs forming a star within the m of the first name and there are 8-rayed stars in the b of the first bn and the m of the 3rd name. There are two stars (the left 7-rayed, the right 6-rayed) above bn h\text{dr} and 6- or 7-rayed star below the same bn. There is another symbol of 7 $^h$-signs between the first m of gmn and the k of kmy and a curious "L"-shaped line in the bn immediately after kmy. Finally, there are apparently stray marks in the g and the first m of gmn.
